CIA Pressed Case for War

Tenet assured Bush of 'slam dunk' on WMD, new book says

WASHINGTON | In a new book on the origins of the war in Iraq, Washington Post assistant managing editor Bob Woodward reports that in early 2002 the CIA concluded covert action could not remove Saddam Hussein. The Iraqi dictator was organized to stop a coup and the CIA realized it would have a hard time convincing Iraqis that the United States was serious about getting rid of him.

The only way to establish credibility was by making it clear the United States planned to invade. And for the invasion to be successful the agency was going to have to work hard to find new intelligence sources.

With President Bush's approval, the CIA developed a plan to work with anti-Saddam opposition groups and conduct paramilitary operations inside the country, Woodward writes in "Plan of Attack," which is being excerpted in the Post this week.

That July a team of CIA operatives established a base in northern Iraq. By the fall, it was handing out tens of millions of dollars in $100 bills to recruit informants within Hussein's regime. Their information was so good that the CIA's name for them was ROCKSTARS.

Meanwhile, Congress asked the CIA to develop a National Intelligence Estimate on Iraq's weapons of mass destruction. CIA officials decided the report should not be equivocal — Hussein, they said, had the weapons. But when CIA Director George J. Tenet and his deputy John McLaughlin presented the president "The Case" on WMD, Bush was not convinced. "I've been told all this intelligence about having WMD, and this is the best we've got?" he said.

"It's a slam-dunk case" Tenet insisted. "Don't worry," he said, "it's a slam dunk!"

CRIME | All Wet A bank robber in Olympia, Wash., wearing a wetsuit under his clothes tried to make a scuba-diving getaway but was tackled by police before he reached the water, authorities say. Police subdued Charles E. Coma, 35, on

Thursday on the shore of Budd Inlet after a car chase, a crash and a sweaty quarter-mile dash through the woods, during which he tried to sprint into the water while lugging his diving gear and a backpack filled with the stolen cash. (AP) EyeOpeners | Page 2

One Felony, Extra Crispy

Police in Pittsburgh on Friday said they were looking for a man who called a KFC restaurant last month and placed an unusual takeout order — a robbery. The man called the restaurant, said he was a police officer and told the manager that a robber was on his way to the store and that the store employees should cooperate so nobody would get hurt. Police planned to grab the robber as he left the store, the caller said. Moments later, a robber showed up and took $200, but no police arrived to arrest him — fueling suspicion that the telephone “cop” and restaurant robber are the same person. (AP)

They came to learn about cars, but Taurean Windrum, left, and Jason Kroeker, both 13, got an education of a different sort on Saturday at the Powerama Motoring Expo car show in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada. The Web site for the show, which celebrated its 20th anniversary over the weekend, promised “many special guests, exciting displays and fun for the whole family.” Among the events available for 13-year-olds were the daily “swimwear fashion shows,” such as the one pictured above, and a drawing for Hot Wheels toys, open to “kids age 16 and under.” The expo also featured cars or something. Frat Fry

Two former fraternity brothers were sentenced to community service on Friday — but avoided jail time — for stealing and eating a jumbo goldfish at the University of California, Santa Cruz. The men were drunk when they snatched the 18-inch koi fish, which lived in a university-owned pond. The men fried the fish and fed it to fraternity pledges last year. Casey Loop, 23, and Matthew Cox, 22, last month pleaded no contest to misdemeanor grand theft and vandalism. The incident was filmed for the MTV series “Fraternity Life,” but never aired. Prosecutors used subpoenas to obtain outtakes. (AP)

The Tall Guy

Leonid Stadnik, 33, of Podoliansi, Ukraine, wishes he would stop growing. He's already 8 feet, 4 inches. Recent measurements show that Stadnik is 7 inches taller than Radhouane Charbib of Tunisia, listed by the Guinness Book of World Records as the tallest living man. Stadnik's unusual growth began after a brain operation at age 14, which is believed to have stimulated his pituitary gland. Since then, life just keeps getting harder. However, his friends are trying to organize a trip to the Carpathian Mountains to show him “there's something in the world taller than you,” one neighbor said. (AP)

Rice: U.S. Concerned About Terrorism During Election

The United States is bracing for possible terrorist attacks before the November presidential election, national security adviser Condoleezza Rice said Sunday. The opportunity for terrorists to try to influence the election, as was the case last month in Spain, appears to be an opportunity that would "be too good to pass up for them," Rice said. (AP)

GRAND FORKS, N.D. | A day after the five-month search for University of North Dakota student Dru Sjodin ended with the discovery of her body, the campus community reacted with a mixture of mourning and relief Sunday.

Sjodin, 22, from Pequot Lakes, Minn., was last seen alive Nov. 22 at a Grand Forks shopping mall.

Her body was found Saturday in a ravine near a county road northwest of Crookston, Minn.

Sjodin's sorority, Gamma Phi Beta, sponsored a candlelight vigil for students Sunday night.

Alfonso Rodriguez Jr., the man charged with kidnapping Sjodin, could face a federal murder charge now that her body has been found.

Rodriguez, 51, a convicted sex offender, has pleaded not guilty. He was arrested in December and is jailed in Grand Forks on $5 million bail.

Attorneys familiar with the case said Saturday it was likely federal prosecutors would take over for a murder case. Sjodin was last seen in North Dakota but her body was found in Minnesota, indicating the crime may have crossed state lines.

Rice Denies Report On War Decision

Says January discussion on Iraq misinterpreted in Woodward's book

WASHINGTON | National security adviser Condoleezza Rice forcefully disputed on Sunday an assertion that President Bush decided in early January 2003 to invade Iraq, three months before official accounts say the decision was made.

The statement, in Washington Post reporter Bob Woodward's new book about the run-up to war, is "simply not, not right," Rice said.

Bush told reporters at a prime-time news conference on March 6 that a U.N. Security Council resolution authorizing action was days away. Ten days later, having failed to win approval, the resolution was withdrawn, and the assault began March 20.

Rice did not deny the private conversation between her and Bush just after New Year's Day in which Woodward said the decision was made, but she said the writer had misinterpreted what was said.

"[President Bush] said, 'No, I think we probably are going to have to go to war. We're going to have to go to war.' And it was not a decision to go to war," Rice said on CBS's "Face the Nation." "That decision he made in March, when he finally decided to do that." WILLIAM C. MANN (AP)

Kerry Blasts Bush Policies

President is 'stunningly ineffective' at foreign relations, Democrat says

MIAMI | Democrat John Kerry on Sunday accused President Bush of being "stunningly ineffective" at foreign policy and stuck by his argument that the war against terrorism isn't primarily a military struggle.

Kerry, in a wide-ranging interview on NBC's "Meet the Press," also stood by his promise to create 10 million jobs and halve the deficit in his first term if elected, though he conceded that soaring red ink could squeeze some proposals.

The Massachusetts senator and presumptive Democratic presidential nominee pressed his argument that Bush, the Republican incumbent, went about the Iraq war in a way that has left the United States and its troops shouldering too much of the burden. He said he would build an international alliance to share the responsibility for rebuilding Iraq.

"I think this administration has proven, frankly, stunningly ineffective in diplomacy," Kerry said, citing Bush's policy change on Israel last week.

Kerry rejected the suggestion that he's been inconsistent on Iraq because he voted for the congressional resolution that authorized the use of force, and against $87 billion in additional funding for the war.

Kerry

Bush campaign spokesman Steve Schmidt said Kerry's appearance "was filled with inaccuracies, attacks and pessimism toward the future of the country."

Festival at Iowa College Sparks Riot

AMES, IOWA | A yearly festival near the Iowa State University campus turned riotous early Sunday when more than 1,000 people vandalized cars, broke storefront windows and tore down street lights, police said.

Officers broke up the crowd with tear gas and arrested about 30 people on charges ranging from disorderly conduct to assaulting a police officer, police said.

About 20 people received treatment for minor injuries at a nearby hospital, mainly for skin and eye irritations from the tear gas.

There were no estimates of property damage Sunday, but police said the damage was "extensive."

Duke Tells Drowsy Students: Sleep In

DURHAM, N.C. | Duke University is eliminating 8 a.m. classes and trying to come up with other ways to help its sleep-deprived students, who too often are struggling to survive on a mix of caffeine, adrenaline and ambition.

The school is also considering new orientation programs this fall that would help freshmen understand the importance of sleep.

Lack of sleep among college students is an old problem, but one that appears to be getting worse, according to some national surveys.

College students sleep an average of six to seven hours a night, down from seven to seven and a half in the 1980s. Last month, the University of Michigan held a national conference on sleep, stress, depression and college students. Sleep deprivation can hurt academic performance and increase stress levels.

James Clack, Duke's director of counseling and psychological services, said the latest research shows that college-age people should be getting nine hours of sleep a night. Duke wants students to consider adequate sleep a part of overall wellness. (AP)

Hamas Vows to Strike Back

Mourners flood streets at funeral of leader killed in Israeli attack

GAZA CITY, GAZA STRIP | Hamas threatened "100 unique reprisals" against Israel for killing its leader, Abdel Aziz Rantisi, as hundreds of thousands of mourners flooded the streets Sunday.

Rantisi and two of his bodyguards were killed Saturday when two missiles struck the car they were traveling in.

Hamas chose a replacement for Rantisi on Sunday, but did not disclose his name — a sign that Israel's systematic campaign to wipe out the Hamas leadership has put the Islamic militant group on the defensive.

Rantisi's killing set off demonstrations — some of them violent — across Gaza and the West Bank, as well as in Arab countries. In the West Bank, Israeli troops shot and critically wounded a 14-year-old Palestinian boy in a clash between stone throwers and soldiers.

Israel rebuffed international criticism for the killing, saying Rantisi was targeted because he directed Hamas attacks against Israelis and was planning more. Hamas has claimed responsibility for dozens of suicide bombings in Israel, killing hundreds.

Many Palestinians held the United States responsible, however. "The Palestinian government considers this Israeli terrorist campaign to be a direct result of American encouragement and the total American bias in favor of the Israeli government," said Palestinian Prime Minister Ahmed Qureia.

Palestinian officials are furious with President Bush for sidelining them and backing Israel's demand to retain parts of the West Bank.

In an interview with ABC, Bush's national security adviser, Condoleezza Rice, denied that Bush gave Sharon the go-ahead for the Rantisi killing. LARA SUKHIAN (AP)

Iraqis Not Ready to Take Over Security

Bremer lays out reasons U.S. troops should stay

BAGHDAD | Iraqi security forces will not be ready to protect the country against insurgents by the June 30 handover of power, the top U.S. administrator said Sunday.

The unusually blunt comments from L. Paul Bremer came amid a weekend of new fighting that pushed the death toll for U.S. troops in April to 99, already the record for a single-month in Iraq.

The military had always planned to remain after June 30, when the U.S. is to hand over sovereignty to Iraq. But Bremer said the fighting across the country this month exposed the depth of the problems inside the security forces.

"Early this month, the foes of democracy overran Iraqi police stations and seized public buildings in several parts of the country," he said. "Iraqi forces were unable to stop them."

"It is clear that Iraqi forces will not be able, on their own, to deal with these threats by June 30," Bremer said in a statement. LEE KEATH (AP)

Spain's Troops to Leave Iraq

New leader cites lack of U.N. control as reason

MADRID, SPAIN | Spain's new prime minister ordered his country's 1,300 troops pulled out of Iraq as soon as possible Sunday, fulfilling a campaign pledge to a nation still recovering from terrorist bombings that al Qaeda militants said were reprisals for Spain's support of the war.

Jose Luis Rodriguez Zapatero issued the abrupt recall just hours after his government was sworn in, saying there was no sign the United States would meet his demands for staying in Iraq — United Nations control of the postwar occupation.

In a five-minute address at the Moncloa Palace, Zapatero said he had ordered his defense minister to "do what is necessary for the Spanish troops ... to return home in the shortest time possible."

Zapatero's Socialist party won the March 14 election amid allegations that outgoing Prime Minister Jose Maria Aznar had provoked commuter-train terrorist bombings, which killed 191 people on March 11, by backing the war in Iraq.

The announcement was a setback for the United States, which was eager to maintain an international veneer on an increasingly besieged coalition force dominated by the 130,000 U.S. troops.

Investigators Search for Clues to Kosovo Shootout

PRISTINA, SERBIA-MONTENEGRO | Investigators searched for evidence and interviewed eyewitnesses Sunday in an attempt to find out why a Jordanian U.N. police officer opened fire on U.S. correctional officers in Kosovo, killing two.

The Jordanian officer was also killed in the shootout Saturday at the U.N.-run prison in the northern town of Kosovska Mitrovica.

The shooting was the latest shock for the U.N. mission in the province, which is still grappling with the fallout from violent clashes last month between ethnic Albanians and Serbs that killed 19 and injured more than 900 in Kosovska Mitrovica.

It is still unclear what sparked the shooting between officers from the police and correctional units of the U.N. mission. Ten Americans and one Austrian were also injured in the violence.

Officials denied rumors that a quarrel about the war in Iraq had sparked the gun battle. But a U.S. police officer serving with the U.N. mission said the shooting was "clearly an attack against Americans." The officer, who spoke on condition of anonymity, did not elaborate. (AP)

Isabel Continues To Affect Region

Health officials warn that 2003 storm could clear path for West Nile

WASHINGTON | Hurricane Isabel could continue wreaking havoc this year by promoting the West Nile virus and providing extra fuel for forest fires.

Virginia health officials say the thousands of trees uprooted by Isabel left thousands of holes — potential puddles in shady areas that will become perfect places for mosquitoes to breed.

Although West Nile season doesn't begin until summer, officials already are encouraging landowners to fill in holes.

Agnes Flemming, Norfolk's environmental health manager, said homeowners should fill in root-ball holes in their neighborhood and empty water in containers around their property, including gutters.

"It only takes a teaspoon of water to cause damage," she told The Washington Post.

Forestry officials say they expect forest fires this year to be larger and burn longer because of all the debris on the ground, which provides both fuel for a fire and an obstacle to getting firefighting equipment into the woods. As many as 1 million trees came down in Virginia.

The number of West Nile cases has been rising nationally in the past five years, but the number of people who contracted the disease in Virginia fell from 29 in 2002 to 25 in 2003. One person died. (AP)

Montgomery Eyes Canadian Drugs

ROCKVILLE, MD. | Some members of the Montgomery County Council will recommend that the county purchase drugs from Canada for employees and retirees to save money, defying the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Tom Perez, a council member, is pushing to establish a voluntary program for current and former employees to fill their prescriptions in Canada, where drugs can cost as much as 70 percent less than they do in the United States.

Perez, who chaired a committee that will release its report on the issue Monday, said that the law surrounding the matter is "muddled." He also said the FDA has not yet sued any public officials for promoting the purchase of drugs in Canada. (AP)

SINCE YOU ASKED

Q I'm 5 feet, 6 inches tall and while I can reach the overhead handrail on Metrorail cars, I lack the strength to keep a good grip. Have hanging loops been considered?

A Yes, but Metro opted not to add loops to its next shipment of rail cars because they would block the view of electronic signs that show upcoming stops and could get in the way of passengers, said Pat Porzillo, chief engineer in Metro's department of operations.

But hang in there. The next shipment of rail cars (expected by February 2006) will have more than 46 feet of handrail on the walls near doors in L-shapes or vertical bars that are closer to the ground, Porzillo said. Those will replace the floor-to-ceiling handrails to make more room for wheelchairs and bikes, and give you a handhold that's easier to grab.

Overall, the new cars will have 44 percent more handrail that Metro hopes will encourage riders to move toward the center of cars, rather than crowding the doors. Cars will lose two to four seats, but gain room for 12 to 18 standees.

Few Testify on Fare Hikes

Most who comment oppose Metro's plan to increase rates, fees

WASHINGTON | Metro officials heard from fewer than 500 people — about enough to fill just five rail cars — during public hearings last month on proposed increases in fares and parking fees that would take effect the last week of June.

Although 264 people attended the nine hearings throughout the region, only 124 spoke up, and another 355 people commented through e-mail or letters, officials said last week.

Board members are considering the increases in an effort to raise at least $23 million to balance the budget for the coming fiscal year.

Few riders said they understood the need for increased rates, and some at Metro said the timing of the hearings didn't help: They came on the heels of a rush-hour fire on the Red Line and news that Metro may have lost millions through alleged thefts by parking lot cashiers.

More than 85 percent of those who commented on fares for rail, bus and Metro's service for the disabled, as well as parking charges, opposed any hikes — and as many as a third of them threatened to ditch mass transit and take to the roads, officials said.

Complaints centered on service reliability, Metro management and employee courtesy.

Metro has estimated a second consecutive year of fare increases could cost the system more than 15,000 daily subway riders and almost 12,000 daily bus riders.

There was support, though, for raising money through other means, such as selling advertising on bus shelters and putting ATMs in some rail stations. Fewer supported movie-style ads inside rail tunnels or video monitors for buses and rail cars.

Metro also floated ideas for fare increases scheduled at intervals of one or more years, which drew little attention. DANNY FREEDMAN (EXPRESS)

MBAS | According to stereotype, business students should be single-minded in their pursuit of money.

But don't tell that to Daron Horwitz, who spent his spring break visiting schools in Iraq that will be helped by a nonprofit group he and other students formed at Northwestern University's Kellogg School of Management.

In recent years, say experts, the curricula at business schools across the country have been placing more emphasis on ethics, nonprofit work and social responsibility.

For Horwitz, 29, the inspiration to start a nonprofit came a year ago, after the fall of Baghdad. Soon after, he was approaching his peers to help him form their organization, Americans Supporting Iraqi Students.

Other MBA students elsewhere say they, too, want to use their degrees to make a difference.

Stephani Kobayashi Stevenson, for instance, made the decision to attend business school while she was volunteering with the Peace Corps in Papua New Guinea.

"It changed my life to see the devastating effects of globalization, as well as the ramifications of poor business decisions," said Stevenson, who is 28 and an MBA student at Georgetown University.

Christina Murray, who'll graduate this spring with her MBA from Babson College, has accepted a job at Project Place, a Boston nonprofit that helps homeless and low-income people find jobs and housing.

Murray said she used to think that her business background would be a liability in the nonprofit world. But she soon discovered that charitable organizations are increasingly looking for business types to help them survive. MARTHA IRVINE (AP)

ADRIENNE LUNDGREN, 29

JOB: Senior photograph conservator at the Library of Congress

SALARY: $60,000 to $78,000

EDUCATION: Bachelor's in art history and a master's in art conservation

WHAT SHE DOES: Lundgren repairs, cleans and prevents damage to photographs in the library's collections. Determining the process used to create a photo (there are 30 or so, such as daguerreotypy) is a critical first step, for which she uses tools borrowed from forensic science to identify chemicals and fibers. She's worked on 1855 photos of the Crimean War, right, by Roger Fenton, said to be the earliest war photographer, and is planning conservation work on what is possibly the nation's oldest self-portrait, taken in 1839 — "right at the beginning of photography."

WOULD YOU WANT HER JOB? The conservator is "a doctor for works of art," so you'll need to be deft with your hands and have patience aplenty, as tasks can take anywhere from hours to weeks. Warning: You may find yourself meticulously rotating your pictures at home to limit harmful exposure to the sun.

HOW YOU CAN GET HER JOB: Photo conservation is a small, competitive field — Lundgren estimates there are fewer than 100 conservators in the country — and you won't get far without at least a master's degree. Graduate schools will be looking for knowledge of art and chemistry.

NO PLACE LIKE HOME: Manny Ramirez is tagged out at home plate in the Yankees' 7-3 victory over Boston on Sunday.

The Yankees Strike Back

New York drops Boston 7-3 in Game 3 of series

BASEBALL | Even without any help from Alex Rodriguez, the New York Yankees got back to beating the Boston Red Sox.

A-Rod remained hitless for the series, but Derek Jeter went 2-for-4 with two walks and an RBI single in the six-run third inning that led the Yankees to a 7-3 victory Sunday — their first win of the season against their archrival.

Gary Sheffield doubled twice, and Paul Quantrill (1-0) held Boston to one hit over 2 2/3 innings after Jose Contreras almost blew a six-run lead in the third. Quantrill, Gabe White, Tom Gordon and Mariano Rivera combined for 6 2/3 scoreless innings.

Rodriguez is 0-for-12 in the series; he stranded seven runners Sunday, and his batting average is down to .156, but the third baseman did throw out Manny Ramirez on a close play at the plate in the third inning.

The crowd cheered when Rodriguez, the reigning AL MVP, lofted a harmless fly to center with the bases loaded, ending the ninth.

Pitching on 10 days' rest, Derek Lowe (1-1) lasted just 2 2/3 innings, allowing seven runs, eight hits and four walks.

Ramirez had two hits for the Red Sox, who beat the Yankees in the first two games of the series but needs a win in the Patriots Day game on Monday to avoid a split.

Kings Outscore Mavs In First Game of Series

Stojakovic fuels an onslaught of 3-pointers in Sacramento's win

NBA PLAYOFFS | Peja Stojakovic scored 28 points and Chris Webber added 26 points and 12 rebounds, propelling the Sacramento Kings to a 116-105 victory over the Dallas Mavericks in Game 1 of the best-of-seven playoff series Sunday.

The Kings made a franchise-record 11 of their 21 3-pointers, including five by Stojakovic to tie Sacramento's individual playoff best. The Kings were energized from the opening tip, and not even Dirk Nowitzki could keep Dallas close in the fourth quarter of a fit-

Devils Coach Battling Cancer

HOCKEY | New Jersey Devils coach Pat Burns has colon cancer and will immediately begin treatment, he said Sunday, a day after the defending Stanley Cup champions were knocked out of the playoffs.

Burns, 52, said his status with the team will be determined in six to eight weeks, when the treatment ends. He will undergo treatment five days a week beginning this week, he said.

A three-time NHL coach of the year, Burns led the Devils to their third Stanley Cup title in nine years last season, his first with the team.

New Jersey lost to Philadelphia 3-1 Saturday, losing the best-of-seven opening round series in five games.

"I wasn't the coach I should have been the last couple of weeks, but I had a lot of things on my mind so it was understandable," he said.

Burns insisted on coaching the Devils against the Flyers, although he said treatment would have prevented him from coaching if New Jersey had gotten past the first round.

Before arriving in New Jersey, Burns coached Montreal, Toronto and Boston for a total of 13 seasons.

V. Williams Beats Martinez For First Title in 14 Months

Venus Williams turned her game around completely after the first set and beat Conchita Martinez 2-6, 6-2, 6-1 on Sunday to win the Family Circle Cup for her first title in 14 months. Williams looked unsteady in the opening set and lost her serve twice. But she played more aggressively over the last two sets, handling Martinez's changing speeds and volleying with confidence. (AP)

Wait Worth It for Wallace

Rusty Wallace held off Bobby Labonte for the last 30 laps Sunday to end his 105-race winless streak — and more than five hours on the track at Martinsville Speedway. The Advance Auto Parts 500 was halted for more than an hour with 210 laps to go after a block of concrete came loose in the third turn, leaving a dangerous hole a foot long and a foot wide in the surface. Wallace passed Jimmie Johnson for the lead on the 456th lap and pulled away on a restart with 38 laps left. (AP)

Cink a Sure Thing in Playoff

Stewart Cink came from nine strokes down to force a playoff, then beat Ted Purdy with a birdie on the fifth extra hole to win the MCI Heritage on Sunday in Hilton Head, S.C. Cink shot a 7-under 64 to pull off the second biggest PGA comeback and win his first title in four years. Cink had six birdies and an eagle to catch Purdy at 10-under 274. Purdy started the round with a four shot lead, but struggled to a 2-over 73. Ernie Els shot a 69 to finish in a tie for third at 8-under, his same score of a week ago when he lost by a stroke to Phil Mickelson at the Masters. (AP)

Orioles Sweep Blue Jays

DuBose allows 3 hits in Baltimore's first shutout of the season

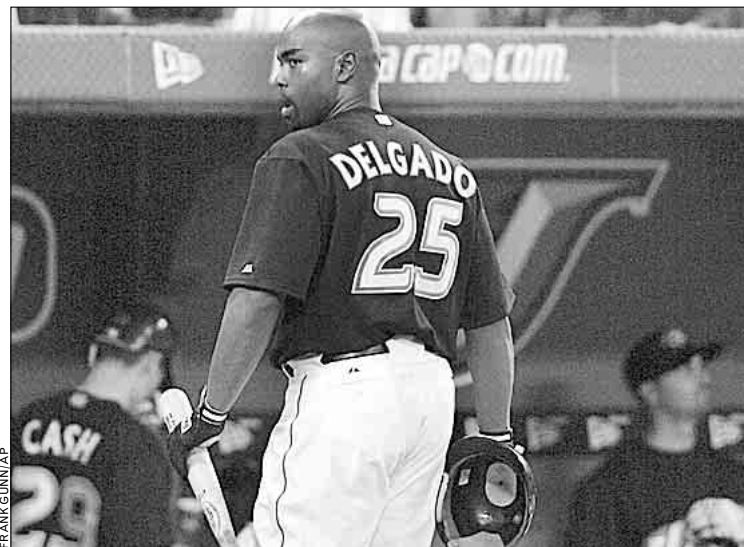

BASEBALL | Eric DuBose, B.J. Ryan and Buddy Groom combined on a four-hitter, pitching the Baltimore Orioles past the struggling Toronto Blue Jays 7-0 Sunday for their fourth straight victory.

Toronto fell to 0-6 at home and 3-9 overall, matching the worst start in club history.

Miguel Tejada had four hits and Jay Gibbons hit a two-run double for the Orioles, who swept the three-game series — their first sweep at SkyDome in 10 years.

They did it by shutting down Toronto's offense, allowing just 12 hits while outscoring the Blue Jays 23-5.

DuBose (1-2) gave up three hits — all singles — while striking out five

Actress Going on Star

Jennifer Garner is poised to make her most acrobatic jump

PERSONALITY | Jennifer Garner, best known for her butt-kicking secret agent on ABC's "Alias," is ready to show off her funny side in her first big-screen starring role.

In the romantic comedy "13 Going on 30," she plays a nerdy seventh-grader who grows up literally overnight thanks to some magic dust. Waking up in a luxurious Manhattan condo, Jenna discovers that all her childhood dreams have come true: She's a gorgeous woman with a fabulous job. She's got a great figure, a closetful of cool designer clothes and a hunky boyfriend brushing his teeth in her bathroom. What more could a girl want? Plenty, as it turns out.

Once a thoughtful, good-hearted schoolgirl, Jenna is horrified to discover that she's become a shallow, ruthless adult. Worst of all, she finds out that she long ago cut ties with Matt, her best friend from middle school. And Matt (played by Mark Ruffalo) is engaged. Jenna decides to take a second chance at first love.

Garner, who just turned 32, said she felt she had good material for her first starring role, and the project was in good hands with director Gary Winick ("Tadpole").

She also admitted that her "Alias" peers encouraged her to take the film part. "If you were to hang out on the set of 'Alias,' she said, 'you would very quickly agree with the cast and crew that I'm 30 when the camera is rolling and 13 when they say 'cut.'"

That's not to say Garner is immature. She is a hardworking, driven actress who spent years auditioning and trying to make ends meet before she was hired for "Alias" in 2001. Her portrayal of double-agent Sydney Bristow earned her a Golden Globe award, not to mention a dedicated fan base.

Parlaying her success into movie roles, she starred as the comic-book hero Elektra opposite Ben Affleck in last year's "Daredevil." She had a small but memorable role in "Catch Me If You Can" with Leonardo DiCaprio, and is currently gearing up for the upcoming spinoff "Elektra."

Garner is also two shows away from wrapping the third season of "Alias," which she promises will end with a bang.

"We're opening up a huge can of worms right before we finish," she said with a hint of mischief. ANGELA DAWSON (ENTERTAINMENT NEWS WIRE)

Music to Anyone's Ears: The Sound of the Sounds

Everything old is new again, especially in the capable hands of today's crop of guitar-rock groups. So if late-period Blondie and endless replays of that old Missing Persons record (the good one) aren't cutting it and you need a tow-headed-chick-singer-fronted-pop-garage-band fix, tune into the sound of The Sounds, Swedish sweet-tarts who craft zippy three-minute delectables that are more entertaining than progressive.

9:30 Club, 815 V St. NW; with Division of Laura Lee, 9 p.m., $10; 202-265-0930. (U St.-Cardozo)

The Good Parts

A new DVD player's software cuts out the sex and violence

EDITING | People wanting to mute the foul language in "Seabiscuit" or skip the violence in "The Patriot" have a new option — a DVD player from RCA that filters "objectionable" content with software from a company called ClearPlay.

Thomson, which owns the RCA brand, will sell the players in some Wal-Mart and Kmart stores as well as on Wal-Mart's Web site starting this month despite facing a legal challenge from Hollywood.

The DVD player will ship with 100 filters for movies such as "Daredevil" and "Pirates of the Caribbean: The Curse of the Black Pearl."

NO SEX, PLEASE: ClearPlay's filter asks how much strong language you can take.

Filters for newer releases are available each week through a monthly subscription of $4.95, though getting them into the player is cumbersome. The filters are downloaded over the Internet and burned onto a CD for transfer to the DVD player. Various filters are then created in four broad categories: violence; sex and nudity; language and "other," which includes explicit drug use.

The filters can then be further adjusted: Under language, for instance, viewers can filter for six levels, including "Vain Reference to Deity" or "Strong Profanity."

No filters are created for extra content, including bonus scenes and documentaries, and for movies where violence is central, such as "The Passion of the Christ," no filter will be created at all.

Hollywood studios are not covering their eyes — or holding their tongues. The Directors Guild of America and some film studios filed a lawsuit in 2002 against ClearPlay and a Colorado video rental store, CleanFlicks, which uses its own software to decode a DVD, alter it for content, then burn a new, edited version, back onto a DVD for rental.

The lawsuit is still pending. GARY GENTILE (AP)

Jam Band Has a Ball

Widespread Panic calms down for a tight, nuanced album

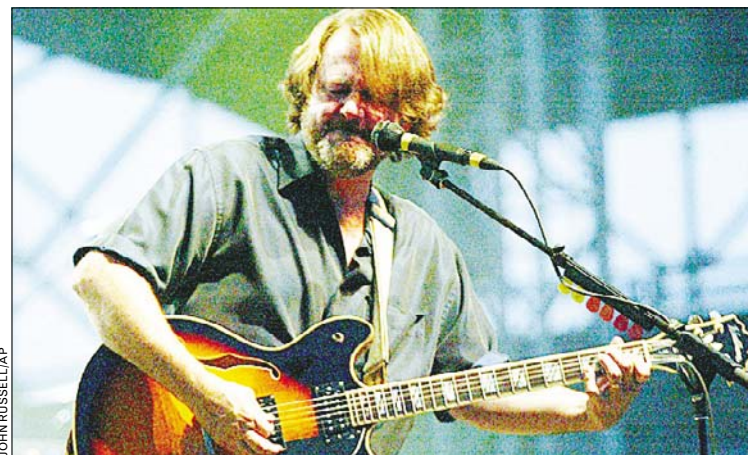

MUSIC | For a band like Widespread Panic, which uses the happenstance groove of a live show to guide them in the studio, an album of never-before-heard tunes like its latest, "Ball" (Sanctuary), is more than bold, it's an outright risk.

Through seven albums, the Georgia boys of Panic have refined and revamped their songs through live performances long before recording an album.

"Ball" hasn't had that vetting, but the songs on the band's first album since band member Mickey Houser died of cancer two years ago are palpably refined.

On most tracks, it is a greater attention to nuance and refinement that differentiates this Panic album from any other.

"Thin Air (Smells Like Mississippi)" has the same Southern-rock sentiment laid over a backdrop of Caribbean drums that Panic has long played. But it feels smoother and seamless, even for a band that plays tighter than most.

JOHN RUSSELL/AP

"Sparks Fly" carries the momentum. It's a riff-driven ballad with a late-1970s, early-'80s rock 'n' roll feel that's easy to bob your head to.

There's no faulting Widespread Panic for denying their fans a song until an album hits the shelf. But it's hard to say if Panic's most avid fans will embrace a song if it's released before they hear it in a show.

As a testament to that, the most exciting moment on the album is actually hidden. Tacked onto the album's end, it's 10-plus minutes of a psychedelic rough studio cut. There are no lyrics and no format, making it a memorable finale.

Even in the structure of the studio, it seems the jam lives on.

Dramas Get a New Lease on Life

FRANCHISES | Network executives spend much of their time this month in darkened rooms, watching pilots for new shows and guessing which can become hits.

Some of the guesswork is gone at CBS and NBC, where additional spinoffs of "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation" and "Law & Order," respectively, are already penciled in.

They're the franchises, proven winners whose success is irresistible; it's no coincidence that CBS and NBC are the two most popular networks. The challenge comes in making sure expansion is not dilution, or that playing it safe ultimately doesn't make them sorry.

The fourth "Law & Order" entry will be known as "Law & Order: Trial by Jury," and will star Jerry

In 1996, "Law & Order" created synergy with NBC's "Homicide: Life on the Street."

Orbach, who's spent 12 years portraying Detective Lennie Briscoe on the mother ship.

"CSI: New York," the third in that series, has two well-known actors as centerpieces: Melina Kanakaredes of "Providence" and Gary Sinise.

It's easy to see why both are being made. They're the closest thing in television to a sure thing. Each of the three previous spinoffs has succeeded, in a business where the vast majority of new series fail.

Fail to Succeed

WB finds a tricky way to reward unwitting singers' bad behavior

REALITY | In the way “Joe Millionaire” turned “The Bachelor” upside down and tricked its contestants into thinking they were vying for the hand of someone wealthy, the WB is planning a series that celebrates the type of performer likely to get booted from an “American Idol” audition.

“The WB’s Superstar,” set for a seven-week run beginning May 17, will give aspiring singers a shot at a talent and recording deal worth $100,000.

LATE BLOOMER: William Hung gets his.

What they won’t be told is that instead of advancing the best performers, the producers select “those who have more guts than pipes,” the network said Thursday. (AP)

ON TV TONIGHT

A PROGRAM TO DIE FOR
FAMILY PLOTS (9 p.m., A&E) This funeral-home documentary series breaks little new ground. In fact, this subject has been done to death. It’s difficult for it not to be buried under unfavorable comparisons to stiff competition, including the superlative “Six Feet Under.” And “Family” follows in the wake of more than a generation of memorable funeral-related viewings, including the 1963 comedy “The Loved One” and the amazing 1978 documentary “Gates of Heaven.”

Oddly enough, all of these films take place in Southern California.

“Family” follows the hectic schedule of San Diego’s Poway-Bernardo Mortuary, run by three attractive and high-spirited sisters, their former boxer father and a number of obsessive-compulsive employees. Much of the action involves the hectic juggling of viewings, embalming, burials and other mortuary matters. “Family” has many amusing moments, most of them involving the father’s attempts to juggle his job at the funeral home with his work as a boxing trainer. In one scene he picks up his teenage students but forgets to tell them that he’s also delivering a cardboard coffin, and its contents, to the airport.

ROCCO’S ROCKY ROAD
THE RESTAURANT (10 p.m., NBC) All is not well at Rocco DiSpirito’s eponymous pasta joint as we return for a second helping. Rocco appears to be living in the fool’s paradise of celebrityhood, appearing at book signings and doing charity work while his employees grumble about his absences. It doesn’t help matters when he brings in a guest chef—somebody he met while on a posh vacation in Italy—and begins to treat his own chef, Tony, like an errand boy.

Meanwhile, restaurant owner and all-around dark eminence Jeffrey Chodorow informs his high-flying chef that the place is hemorrhaging dough. And we’re not talking gnocchi. Rocco has ticked off all of his employees, and he’s probably irked his girlfriend by flirting with anything in a skirt.

HOLY CARBON-DATING, BATMAN INVESTIGATING HISTORY (10:15 p.m., History) Bill Kurtis hosts this exploratory look into the past, in which new technology is employed to solve some of history’s great riddles. Tonight’s quest is for the Holy Grail.

CULT CHOICE
Director Mel Brooks offers his take on the march of progress in his 1981 comedy THE HISTORY OF THE WORLD, PART I (10 p.m., AMC). KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Guy You Hadn't Thought About in a Long Time #258

Attorney JOHNNIE COCHRAN JR. will temporarily curtail his work while recuperating from an undisclosed neurological condition. Cochran's family has requested the nature of his condition remain private, publicist Bill Baker said Friday. The condition is not life-threatening and Cochran is expected to recover, Baker said. Cochran, 66, is best known for representing O.J. Simpson at his murder trial in the deaths of his wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and Ronald Goldman. (AP)

COUPLES

White Lies

As tempting as it may be to picture DEMI MOORE and ASHTON KUTCHER cavorting in blinding white outfits conveniently evocative of their rumored nuptials — as in the photo on the cover of last week's Star — it's naught but a beautiful dream. The dress shown in the Star's "$1 Million Wedding of the Year" cover story is actually dark brown, reported the Wall Street Journal; it was digitally altered to appear white. It only gets worse: Ashton's spanking white suit was originally pink. (EXPRESS)

RIGHTS

Cheney's Got a Gun

National Rifle Association leaders planted a giant, ornate rifle in the hands of Vice President DICK CHENEY after his keynote speech to the 133rd NRA convention, dubbed "Freedom's Steel," on Saturday in Pittsburgh. Not unsurprisingly, Cheney portrayed President George W. Bush and himself as champions of gun owners' rights. Cheney was greeted by a standing ovation punctuated by chants of "Four more years." (AP)

Meanwhile, in America ...

The revelation that Malaysian-born Sarah Marbeck is at the center of a sex scandal involving soccer superstar DAVID BECKHAM is nothing for Malaysians to be proud of, a government minister said. "I am disappointed with some local newspapers that have highlighted the scandal as if it is the nation's pride for a local to sleep with a celebrity," Zainuddin Maidin, Malaysia's deputy information minister, told the New Straits Times newspaper. (AP)

PRINCES

And Now, the Royal Speedo

PRINCE WILLIAM made his debut for the Scottish national universities water polo squad Saturday, but his efforts in the pool were not enough to save his team from defeat. The Scottish squad lost both its games — one to Wales, one to Ireland — in the annual Celtic Nations tournament in Cardiff, Wales. "He gave as good as he got was the word in the changing room after the game," said Welsh captain Oliver Newcombe. "We didn't single him out for any special treatment." William is team captain of the water polo team at St. Andrews University. (AP)

TO THE EDITOR

AFTERWATCHING "THE APPRENTICE" finale, I was more disappointed in finalist Kwame Jackson than with the result. He made two fatal mistakes that cost him the game, and Mr. Trump called him on both of them. One was picking Omarosa Manigault-Stallworth for his team, and two, not chastising her or firing her after she blatantly lied to him on a number of occasions. The fact that he didn't know he could fire her was no excuse — he could have pulled her aside and "blasted" her just the same. Sorry, Kwame, I wanted you to win so badly!

—BRENDA SMOOT
via e-mail

THIS IS WHAT "The Apprentice" taught me: Lying and manipulating the system does pay. Why is it that Omarosa, who stabbed Kwame in the back, might get to come back to the show next season, after being a key factor in his downfall, while Kwame gets a nice-guy pat on the back? It doesn't seem that The Donald is practicing what he preaches when he says if you've betrayed, you get fired. He's hiring back Omarosa to another gig in the fall ... give me a break!

Horoscope | Stella Wilder

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Quality time is something you've been thinking a lot about lately, and you can have it — if you choose your companions well.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Avoid letting others know just how tense you are feeling. When you have time, work on calming yourself down.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — You'll discover one or two very good reasons to stick with it — no matter what it may be. Serious dangers are easily avoided.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — You may demonstrate yourself very much the product of your times. You may want to try something in a new, daring way.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Someone may be leading you on, and it's important for you to free yourself from any undue influences as quickly as possible.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — You can inject a great deal of fun into the workplace before the day is out — though not everyone may trust your motives or your methods.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — The research you do will pay off tomorrow — or the next day. Now is the time to make sure you know your stuff.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — You can impress those around you with a demonstration of a skill that you usually take for granted. You have something special.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Think about all you've accomplished in recent days or weeks; you'll realize that the course you've chosen is the right one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — You will want to check and double-check figures. You don't want to make a mistake that is easily avoidable.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — It's likely to get busy for you, so you'll want to pace yourself. Be sure to get that unpleasant duty out of the way ASAP.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Put any fears out of your mind as best you can. There's no reason to think that you'll have anything but the best of luck.

LIVE ONLINE

Cicada Helper

From washingtonpost.com/liveonline

Biologist and author DAVID GEORGE GORDON was online Friday to discuss his "Eat-a-Bug Cookbook" and haute cuisine of the cicada. The insects will soon be flooding the D.C. area.

At what time of day do the cicadas emerge and molt, since the "soft shell" form is a bit more appealing.

Cicadas typically emerge early in the day. So set your alarm clock and keep your eyes peeled. And yes, the softshells are the tastiest, worth waiting 17 years for a taste.

I think you have to be sick and demented to eat insects. We are supposed to live in a civilized culture — so act civilized.

Sick and demented? Tell that to the rest of the world's cultures — Mexico, South America, Australia, Asia and Africa — where people routinely eat bugs. I bet you eat hotdogs. Now that's sick!

How many cicadas would I have to eat to equal the fullness of, say, eating another protein, like a hamburger or a piece of chicken?

Pound for pound, chicken and cicadas are equally protein-rich. The catch, though, is that much of the cicada's protein is tied up in its body armor, which is indigestible by people. You could call it roughage, I suppose. To answer your question, you'd probably need to eat a few dozen cicadas to get your money's worth, protein-wise.

So the bug-eating on the show "Fear Factor" is like a little side dish to you?

I've been called twice by producers of "Fear Factor," looking for new dishes to gross out their contestants. Actually, though, "Fear Factor" and I are at cross-purposes. They want to gross out people with the bugs they serve. I want people to come back for seconds.

Asian Beef & Broccoli with Noodles

Serves: 4

5 Ingredients:

- 1 1/4 lbs. boneless beef top round or top sirloin steak
- 2 packages (3 ounces each) Oriental-flavored instant ramen noodles, broken up
- 1 1/2 tsp. cornstarch dissolved in 1/2 cup water
- 1/2 lb. fresh broccoli florets
- 2 medium carrots, washed and thinly sliced

30 Minutes:

Cut steak into approx. 3" by 1/8" thick strips. Add ramen seasoning to cornstarch mixture in large bowl. Toss in beef. Heat 1 Tbsp. oil in large nonstick skillet over medium-high heat. Stir-fry vegetables 1 minute. Add noodles and 1 1/2 cup water; bring to a boil. Reduce heat; cover and simmer 3 - 5 minutes (until most liquid is absorbed), stirring occasionally. Remove; keep warm. Heat 1 Tbsp. oil in same skillet over medium-high heat. Drain beef (discard marinade). Stir-fry 1/2 of beef at a time, 1 - 2 minutes or until no longer pink (do not overcook). Serve over noodles.

5 Ingredients does not include oil, salt and pepper.
